The definition of a happy marriage differs from person to person. 11 speaking, I define a truly happy marriage as having the following qualities: love, trust, communication, acceptance, and willingness to share and grow together. 12 love, there's no way that a marriage will last. Only through 13 trust can a husband and wife feel secure and in turn have confidence in their relationship. When a dispute occurs, it helps 14 with each other. The more a couple does that, the better they can understand each other and 15 time they'll waste on meaningless fights or quarrels. However, no one is perfect. To love a person sometimes means that one has to accept him/her the way he/she is. If a couple wants to maintain their wonderful relationship forever, they've got to be willing to share everything in their lives with each other and to grow together.

The roots of the Notting Hill Carnival are said to originate in Trinidad and Tobago, a small island country in the Caribbean. To create the theme of the carnival each year, the organizers look at the historical and cultural models that continue to come out of Africa and the Caribbean. The organizers say that they also want to show the benefits and difficulties created by the influence of the traditions that Europeans brought to their native countries. They believe that this type of information makes the carnival educational as well as entertaining. From the Trinidadian point of view, the carnival reflects the social and political experiences of Afro-Caribbean people in Britain.

Thousands of people gather along the sides of the streets in London and wait for the parade of rainbow-colored costumes to appear. From feathers to smiles, the performers in the festival have it all. Steel drums, dancers, and singers bring back the traditional ways of the ancestors as the people celebrate all night long. Stages, mimes, and costumes create performances for everyone to enjoy. The audience seeks a balance of rhythm and movement from the performers. If everything is right, a bond is established between the people who are watching and the people who are performing on stage.

The young and old come together to remember the traditional times. Food is a major part of the festival. Foods from West Africa to Asia mean that there is something for everyone to enjoy. The Notting Hill Carnival promises to be a place where ideas are translated into designs. Balance, colors, rhythms, and movements expose new themes to the people each year. The many cultural influences at the Notting Hill Carnival create a large base for understanding among the people of Britain. The carnival is also known as the August Bank Holiday Monday.

Why does the ocean move? What causes the waves? Blowing winds move the water on the surface of the ocean. There are consistent winds that travel across the world's oceans, creating surface currents. Cold winds that blow from the North and South Poles carry cold water toward the warm, central parts of the Earth. At the same time, surface currents from these warm, central parts shift warm water toward the North Pole and the South Pole. As the Earth turns from east to west, that turning also causes currents to move.

The influence of the moon and the sun helps move the water in the ocean by creating tides. At high tide, water covers more of the beach because it has been pulled higher by the influence of the moon and the sun. At low tide, the water is farther away. Tides vary in strength daily and seasonally. All these elements work together to create the motion of the seas.
