文部科学省は、生態系への悪影響が懸念される海洋ごみの一種「マイクロプラスチック」の監視の強化に乗り出す。今年度から 2022 年度の5年間で、海水中のマイクロプラスチックの量や材質を、人口知能(AI)などで自動計測、分析する新たな装置を開発する。

マイクロプラスチックは世界の海や魚介類の体内から見つかっているが、目視での観測で時間がかかり、汚染の詳細な実態は分かっていない。国は、新措置で海洋中の分布状況や生態系への影響などの把握を急ぐ。

装置は海水に特殊な光を当てて反射した光の波長や、高解像度カメラで撮影した画像データなどから、マイクロプラスチックの材質や大きさ・形、個数を自動的に調べる仕組み。観測船に搭載可能で、航行中の船に海水を汲み上げ、洋上でデータを取得できる。

請依下文回答第 16 題至第 20 題:

What's so bad about being a target online tracked by advertisers? If you don't mind being watched by tracking company employees while you're purchasing or logging into your account on websites, you are not involved in the fuss. In the past few years, a dispute has illustrated. Advertisers collected such fine-grained information about you such as the websites you frequent, what kind of products you're interested and even some private stuff like political views, health problems, and personal finances. Should advertisers have explicit permission to track people and send behavioral ads?

In 2010, America's Federal Trade Commission (FTC) recommended a proposal that consumers should be given a simple "Do Not Track" (DNT) option by Internet browsers. Consumers could tell advertisers whether they want to be followed or not. FTC and Digital Advertising Alliance (DAA) agreed that the industry would make a start on responding to DNT requests. Microsoft's Internet Explorer, Apple's Safari, Google Chrome, and Mozilla's Firefox offered to implement DNT in top gear. Ironically, nowadays some privacy-conscious users may be offended by the new release of Google Chrome for iOS disables DNT in order to have better speed and fewer crashes. Microsoft used to say that Internet Explorer 10 would have DNT as a default; the company is reversing its standard now: DNT will not turn up as a default feature in its new browsers.

Getting a DNT signal does not oblige advertisers to stop tracking, although some self-restrained companies have promised to do so. It is much harder to distinguish whether someone is really against behavior ads or whether they stick with "interest-based" ads. Some users may ignore DNT and press on anyway. Advertisers honor DNT but argue that the decision should be up to users but not by browser vendors. Based on the voluntary principle of "Do Not Track," Microsoft, Chrome and Firefox leave "Do Not Track" off by default. Whether consumers turn DNT on or off is not probably important all that much. After all, using tools like Disconnect Ad Blocking and add-ons like Ghostery and uBlock are more effective if online users want to make sure that they aren't tracked.

- 16 According to the passage, what is DNT for?
  - (A) It effectively blocks the tracks of online advertisers for the users.
  - (B)It helps advertisers track users and provide better online services.
  - (C)It avoids complaints from the advertisers for tracking users online.
  - (D)It sends signals to advertisers that the user does not want to be tracked.
- What does "behavioral ads" mean in the first paragraph?
  - (A) Advertisements that reflect the online behavior of a user.
  - $\hbox{(B)} Advertisements that honor effective online pricing strategy. \$
  - $\hbox{(C)} A dvertisements that understand the behavior of vendors. \$
  - (D) Advertisements that provide services for browse vendors.
- 18 Who belong to "the industry" mentioned in the second paragraph?

(A) online advertisers (B) information technology engineers

(C)Internet browser vendors (D)digital information analysts

19 What may be the reason for browsers to leave DNT off by default?

(A) to make sure that the online users are not tracked (B) to show that it does reflect the users' preference

(C) to support the advertisers for not honoring it (D) to respond to the privacy-conscious users

20 According to the advertisers, who would have the right to decide if the DNT is turned on or off?

(A) Internet company employers (B) online advertisers

(C) online consumers (D) Internet browse developers
